

Draw a comparison between Gross margins of Application software and Internet Services & Software in IT sector (Year 2015)

The gross margin for both application software and the internet services and software industry is depicted in the boxplot.

According to the visual, both industries are left skewed, with the application software industry being the most significantly left skewed.

Both businesses have gross margins in the 0.35 (application software) and 0.67 (internet services & software) ranges, respectively. The gross margins of the Internet services industry are slightly greater than the gross margins of application software.

The average gross margin in the application software market is 0.75, whereas it is 0.65 in the Internet services and software industry. The Internet services market has substantially more variability than the application software industry (standard deviation of Internet services industry is 0.21 and application software industry is 0.14)